LOCALITIES.

Revel services will be inaugurated at the Cumberland Presbyterian church tomorrow. Rev. J. C. Hendricks of Terrell is here to assist in the service.

The wife of Officer Jerry O'Connor died yesterday morning at 1:30 o'clock. Funeral services will take place this evening at 7:30 from the family residence, 302 West Broadway. Friends and acquaintances are invited to attend.

A SUCCESSION OF SUCCESSORS.

The ladies in charge of the opera-house banquet served lunch to the public yesterday between the hours of 12 and 2, from which they realized quite a sum, exhausting the remnants of a royal feast. The management of the affair is much encouraged by its success, especially in a social way. Society will rejoice at the construction of an elegant dining floor, with all the accessories and surroundings that go to make up a fashionable ball-room. At all in all, Thanksgiving was a decided success in the Fort.

DEADLY LAUDANUM.

ONE OF THE "TWIN SISTERS" DIES FROM THE EFFECTS OF THE DRUG.

Yesterday morning about 4 o'clock Alice Carman, a nymph du gave rooming over the Mechanics' exchange, corner of Tenth and Houston streets, died from the effects of laudanum, taken, as she told John New, who had retired to her room, to bring sleep—and it came—eternal sleep. It seems the girl has been dependent ever since "her friend," Celia Craig, who brought her here from Denison, left the city. The woman was known as one of the twin sisters, two women about twenty-one years old, with more than average good looks, and who are also as two persons can be. Alice had been drinking considerable whisky before going to her room with New, and the liquor, having excited her, produced insomnia. She told New she was going to take the drug, and he urged her not to do so, but she took the laudanum by stealth. It is generally believed the drug was taken with suicidal intent, although Dr. J. M. Darter, who was called in to see the woman, but found her dead when he reached the room, says that a well person could have swallowed the dose without fatal effect. Justice Zinn summoned a jury, the body was viewed and testimony taken, when the jury found that deceased came to her death by laudanum administered by her own hand. New must have slept some minutes by the side of a corpse before he became cognizant of his situation. Alice Carman had bought a trunk several days ago from one of our dry goods houses, which she expected to call for to-day, but she will not need it now.

Sad News for the Afflicted.

As announced in THE GAZETTE before, Dr. Wesley will positively leave Fort Worth Thursday, December 10. During the past three months this eminent specialist has performed cures that were well nigh miraculous. And the many cures performed by him have all been right in our midst. Dr. Wesley has always made statements that anyone could verify at any time, and now that he is so soon to leave our city, the afflicted may congratulate themselves if they were so fortunate as to be accounted among his patients. A few more days remain in which the afflicted can consult with him at the Pickwick hotel. He is speedy in his work, so that all may yet profit by his counsel and skillful treatment.

LET GIRLS BEWARE!

The Schemes Employed to Compensate Their Ruin in Dens of Vice.

DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 27.—Miss Irene Woodward and Miss Fannie Phillips arrived here last night from Chicago to go to work waiting upon the patrons of a vice-wise room, having been engaged for that purpose by a man named Morgan Smith. They were met at the depot and escorted to Thompson's variety show. One look at that place was enough. They indignantly rushed out, and went to the National hotel. They stated to a GAZETTE reporter that they were told that the place was run by Maine brothers, and upon inquiry they found that the Maine were all right. But on their arrival they discovered that it was Noye and Bros., and they had no idea there was as low a den on earth. Miss Woodward says she has always clerked in a store, and Miss Phillips worked in a hotel, and they were lured to come to Dallas by the allurements of $10 per week and all expenses paid. Their claims to respectability are backed up by their appearance. They are making efforts to get employment here, the low club of their purse sending thoughts of returning to Chicago beside the question.

This is by no means an isolated case of girls being lured by false representations to come to Dallas to work in the variety shows. A few weeks ago two girls were induced to come from St. Louis to go to work in the Palace Royal. Discovering the character of place it was, they went to the St. James hotel and after a while got employment as servant girls. Numerous other instances could be cited.

Every case of chills and fever readily yields to the powerful influence of Hops' tonic.

PROOF CONCLUSIVE.

George Hoeltzel, a Fort Worth Barber, Dies From a Pistol-Shot.

Was It Murder, or Was It Suicide Because of Gaming Losses?

A man was found dead in Galveston yesterday morning, and the evidence before the jury of inquest indicated strongly that he was a barber from Fort Worth. Diligent inquiry shows the following facts in regard to the recent movements of George Hoeltzel, who was manager of the White Elephant restaurant, and who is beyond doubt the deceased whose body now awaits burial in the Island City. Tuesday night Hoeltzel, in company with Ed. Hoxworth of Cleburne, was seeing the sights. His friends say he was drinking and a warm personal friend says he saw him lose $100 in a gambling house in this city. It is also known that he pawned a fine gold watch to Nick Fitzovich for $50, but whether this and other money he had was also lost in the gambling houses here is not known. One of his friends saw him at 1 o'clock Wednesday morning, and another gentleman says he is nearly positive he saw him on the streets at 2 o'clock Wednesday night, going to the depot. Thursday J. B. Atkeson, who owns the barber-shop, received a letter from Dallas which was signed George Hoeltzel, and in which the writer says: "I am going to New Orleans. I am going, never to return. Do the best you can."

Hoeltzel is said to have been of exemplary habits and was never known to drink or gamble before the night in question. He came from Pennsylvania, and his mother is still living in Philadelphia in that state, while other relatives and a young lady to whom he was engaged, and whom he expected to marry in the spring, reside in Lancaster, Penn. He had no relatives, even the most distant, in this city or state. Hoeltzel left Philadelphia and came directly here and his departure from the city of Brotherly Love was mysterious. He looked up his shop one night, and 6 o'clock the next morning left his home and was never seen in Philadelphia again. The police worked on the case but never got a clue to his whereabouts, when some one who saw an account of his disappearance in the Philadelphia Times, and knew that he was in Fort Worth, wrote him, enclosing a clipping of the article. This he showed to a friend here, who urged him to write home to his mother, telling her he was all right, which he did, when the search ceased. He had wronged no one in Philadelphia, and left no debts behind him, but on the contrary left a good business and furniture, razors, etc., worth a good sum of money. He did not even take his trunk of clothes.

It was well known here that Hoeltzel's right eye was glass, he having lost his eye years ago in an accident. The account of the killing found below sets forth the fact that the right eyeball was driven from its socket and this shows conclusively that the eye was a false one, for otherwise the bullet would have played through the eye and would not have driven it out. The deceased wore clothes marked George. The clothes in his room here in his trunk are marked the same way. It is known that when he left here he took with him a pistol belonging to Mr. Atkeson, and the pistol found by the side of the dead man is doubtless the same weapon.

Poor Hoeltzel! he lost his hard-earned money at the gambling table in Fort Worth, he pawned his watch for $50, takes the train first for Dallas and then for Galveston. His money gone, he becomes despondent and wronging no man but himself walks to a quiet spot and blows his brains out. He is spoken of highly by all who knew him here and greatly regretted is his death.

THE GALVESTON ACCOUNT.

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 27.—The body of an unknown man was found this morning lying on the edge of the sidewalk under the oleander bushes, on Church street near Eighteenth. This locality is the center of the burned district. Near his side was found a revolver, one chamber of which was empty. The bullet had entered the corner of his right eye and passed out near the base of the brain. The evidences point to suicide, but the absence of powder burns creates a suspicion of murder. The deceased was well dressed. He is of fair complexion, is aged about twenty-eight years, five feet six inches in height, Roman nose and square chin. His clothes were all new and of dark material with a white thread running through the cloth. His hat bore the name "Dahlman Bros., Fort Worth." He had no money about him, his entire effects consisting of a bunch of keys, a buckskin pocket-book and pair of common initial sleeve buttons with the letter H. thereon. His linen was marked George. None of the hotel clerks recognized the body.

At the coronor's inquest this afternoon John Richter testified that he recognized the deceased as a man whom he saw in Dallas about three weeks ago. It is said that the deceased was formerly the proprietor of a barber shop in Fort Worth. He bought a dinner at Sweeney's restaurant and spoke German. Investigation thus far has failed to reveal the identity of the man. The bullet as it entered the brain forced the right eye out of its socket. The body when found was lying in a pool of blood and water and bore evidences of having lain in the heavy rain at least two hours.

"THE SONG OF KO"

Lord High Executioner of Tiliu.

Some day it may happen that a victim must be found. So I'll make a little list—a very handy list of clothing trade offenders who might well be under prison. And who never would be missed—who never would be missed.

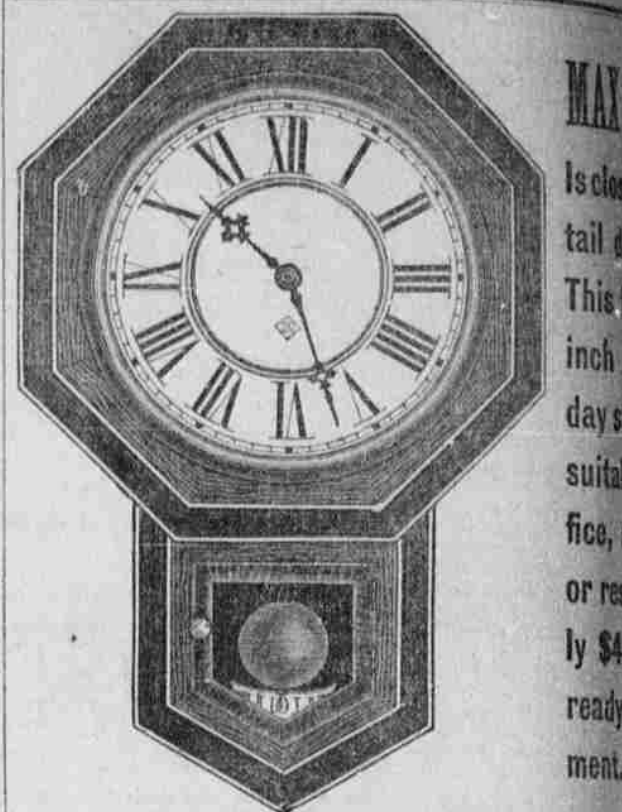

There's the man who always sneers that trade is very bad. And the chronic who declares it's the worst he ever had. And he, who quite a masher is, and paralyzes the ladies. And smokes a cigarette with an odor worse than bad. And the buyer who on reductions unheeded will insist. We know they should not be missed. "We are sure they are."

There is the Cheap John advertiser, who is selling on at once. Who the public cannot wait with all their wealth is lost. There are "bankrupt" men and overful bonds. Who, in order to gain trade, would adopt almost any means. And as the people's patronage audaciously would insist. But we have got them on the list, we have got them on the list.

Respectfully Dedicated and Submitted to the Numerous
